

LITERARY SECTION.

How poor are they who have no patience.—Shakespeare.

Earth has no sorrow that heaven cannot heal.—Thomas Moore.

He prayeth best who loveth best all things, both great and small.—S. T. Coleridge.

No pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage-ground of Truth.—Bacon.

A moral, sensible and well-bred man will not affront me, and no other can.—Robert Southey.

Happiness depends, as nature shows, less on exterior things than most suppose.—William Cowper.

Nothing is more simple than greatness; indeed to be simple is to be great.—R. W. Emerson.

Count that day lost whose low descending sun views from the hand no worthy action done.—P. J. B.

No cord nor cable can so forcibly draw or hold so fast as love can do with a twined thread.—Burton.

Love is indestructible. Its holy flame forever burneth; from heaven it came; to heaven returneth.—R. Southey.

Those who inflict, most suffer, for they see the work of their own hearts and that must be our chastisement or recompense.—P. B. Shelley.

Yes, love indeed is light from heaven; a spark of that immortal fire with angels shared, by Allah given, to lift from earth our low desire.—Lord Byron.

We live in deeds, not years, in thoughts, not breaths, in feelings, not in figures on a dial. We should count time by heart throbs. He most lives who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best. Life's but a means unto an end, that end, beginning, means an end to all things.—God.—P. J. Bailey.

EDUCATION OF FACULTIES.

Every man stamps his value on himself.—Schiller.

No capital earns such interest as personal culture.—Pres Elliot.

The end and aim of all education is the development of character.—Francis W. Parker.

One of the best efforts of thorough intellectual training is a knowledge of our own capacities.—Alexander Bain.

Education is a growth toward intellectual and moral perfection.—Nicholas Murray Butler.

Observation: We get out of Nature what we carry to her.—Katherine Hagar.

Fools learn nothing from wise men, but wise men learn much from fools.—Lavater.

The non-observant man goes through the forest and sees no firewood.—Russian Proverb.

Some men will learn more in a country stage than others in a tour of Europe.—Dr. Johnson.

The world is full of thoughts, and you will find them strewn everywhere in your path.—Elihu Burritt.

—Selected by Boston Housekeeper.

ISN'T IT STRANGE—

How so many women regard actors as the greatest of men?

How so many women like to parade their religious prejudices?

How so many women like to affect a drawl in their conversation?

How so many men wink at derelictions which benefit themselves?

How so many men fall in love with the painted face of a chorus girl?

How so many men find time to promenade the principal thoroughfares?

How so many men think business association makes them society swells?

How so many men have such abiding faith in their power to resist temptations?

How so many women think social barriers should be lifted so far as they are concerned?

How so many women cease to be tractable when self-interest is at stake?—Philadelphia Bulletin.

AMENDED PROVERBS.

A fool and his money are soon parted. (We can't improve upon this.)

Silence is golden, except when you have something that ought to be said, and then it is purty!

Actions sometimes speak louder than words, but a man who talks that way entirely is liable to be misunderstood.

Two heads are better than one sometimes, but this depends largely upon the heads. There are heads and heads.

It is probably true that every cloud has a silver lining, but it is mighty hard work to turn some of them inside out.

Never look a gift horse in the mouth, and then when you try to sell it you won't be embarrassed by too accurate information regarding its age.—Syracuse Herald.

Fitted For Politics.

"What makes you think he would be a great success in politics?"

"He can say more things that sound well and mean nothing than any other man I ever knew."—Chicago Post.

Sipped In The Bud.

"Oh, Alfred! Isn't it too bad! Just as we had everything so nicely arranged for our elopement, father has gone and sanctioned the match."—Harper's Monthly.

Few things are necessary for the wants of this life, but it takes an infinite number to satisfy the demands of opinion.
